

Mother Earth

by Robin Miller

Feel her raindrops falling on our face, they fall for you and me
Bearing all the pain of every race, and still she waits patiently,

Mother Earth I want to see your skies
Mother Earth I long to dry your eyes
Mother Earth when will we realize,
Our life is in your keep - Mother don't weep anymore.

See the Blackness come upon your shores, your air's not fit to breathe
Hate and greed have cut you to the core, this web we've chose to weave,

Mother Earth you know I feel your pain
Mother Earth forgive us for our shame
Mother Earth when will we learn again,
Our life is in your keep - Mother don't weep anymore.

After all of the progress we've made, we still don't understand.
In your love and your tender care, you hold us in your hands.

It's time to be aware of what you are, the home beneath our feet
Once again you'll be a shining star, through love you'll be complete

Mother Earth you'll sing a happy
Mother Earth mankind will sing along Mother Earth your light will shine upon - our life that's in your keep Mother - you won't weep anymore !
